

This histological section shows the endometrium, the inner lining of the uterus. The upper portion is the functional layer, characterized by tall, columnar epithelial cells with prominent nuclei. The lower portion is the basal layer, which is thinner and consists of a more densely packed layer of cells. The boundary between the two layers is clearly visible.