

The start-up team needs to have the leadership, market and operational skills necessary to execute the plan. They're different than management teams in that: They are problem solvers and risk takers not dependent on the infrastructure of a big company to get their job done.