

So while other tech companies are building new sensors and wireless connections for the Internet of Things, don't forget who may be building the brains behind those devices.